9:15 a.m. – Check-ins Begin; Light Breakfast

Parking payment will be lifted for all attendees. Attendees must check in at the table located outside of Holland Hall 180, where those who RSVP'd can pick up their name tags. Guests will then be directed to the large sitting room where the panel discussions will be held. Should the room reach capacity, an overflow room directly above HH 180 will offer a live Zoom Webinar stream of the panels. From 9:15 a.m. to 9:55 a.m., breakfast will be available on a long table in HH 180, featuring freshly brewed coffee, orange juice, assorted continental breakfast items, and seasonal fruit.

10:00 a.m. – Panel #1: The Double Bind of the United States Constitution

Panel #1 will open with a brief welcome from the dean of the law school, Professor Merritt McAlister. Following this, the moderator will introduce the panelists and proceed directly into the discussion. Each panelist will respond to an initial question, with opportunities for other panelists to comment on each question or answer. In the final 15 minutes, attendees will be invited to ask questions from the floor.

Moderator: Professor Johnathan Marshfield

Speakers

1. Professor Sanford Levinson
2. Professor Richard Albert
3. Professor Julie Suk

11:00 a.m. – 15-Minute Break Between Panels

Light refreshments and coffee available in the standing room outside Holland Hall 180.

11:15 a.m. – Panel #2: Looking Forward – The Constitution and Democracy

Panel #2 will begin with introductions from the moderator, followed by an immediate dive into the discussion. Each panelist will respond to an opening question, with opportunities for other panelists to comment on each question or response. The final 15 minutes will be reserved for questions from attendees.

Moderator: Professor Johnathan Marshfield
