Journal 1 due by Sunday, January 21, by 11:59pm:

Your journal is a vehicle for you to comment on the criminal legal system as you see and experience it. Reflect on your experiences in the clinic over the past week or on the criminal legal system more broadly. Delivery via Canvas upload is best, but email is also acceptable. It is helpful, but not required, to begin these entries with a brief description of what you did or saw in the previous week. Please do not merely recite events.

Your journal entries also may serve as a forum for you to provide suggestions about the clinic. You may note that you would prefer a different classroom focus; that you would like different kinds of cases; or that you are having difficulties and want extra guidance. There is no page restriction on these papers, but it is unlikely you could reflect well on a week's work in less than three double-spaced pages. Please be sure to include your name and indicate the dates covered in your report.

Based on student feedback and given that you haven't experienced much in the first week of classes, I am also offering journal prompts. Feel free to use them if you find them helpful. But you are not limited to responding to them in your journal entries.

Journal prompts:

What is your perception of the criminal legal system?

What were your main take-aways from "13th?"

How do you intend to serve as a "change agent" for the legal system?
